

Pinky - Now I'm in trouble, should I tell I tell my mother the truth or should I lie?

Pinky - Sorry mummy, I dropped the jar
you like so much, while playing ball.

Mother - Next time be careful.
You must remember never
to play ball in the house!

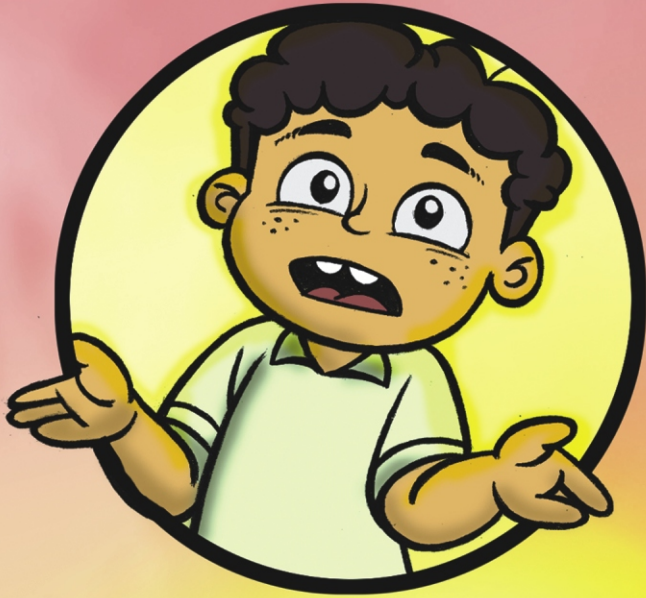

I Must Never Lie

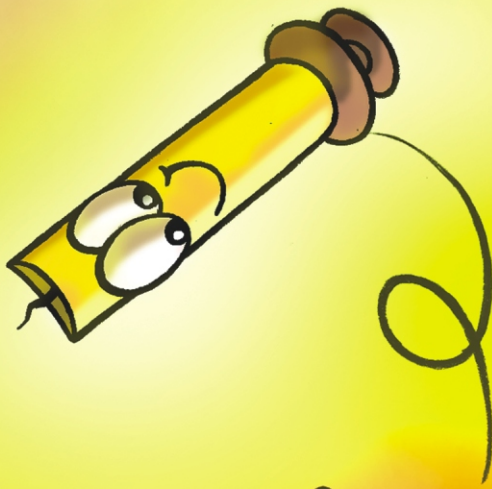

Once I told a lie,
It was in July.
My parents were very sad,
I felt very bad.
So now I never lie,
Never, not even in July!

The Magic Candle

Monu always told lies.
He never told the truth.
He would lie about everything.
You could never believe him!

One day while Monu was playing
he saw a little candle.
It was a lovely golden candle that his father had got home.
It was a magic candle, but Monu didn't know that.

Monu threw the candle around and all of a sudden the candle fell down and broke into two. Monu did not know what to do. He hid the candle and went to bed.

The next day, his father asked everyone, "Have you seen my golden candle?"

He asked Monu too, but Monu said, "No papa, I have not seen your golden candle." This was a lie, as you know Monu had broken the candle.

As soon as Monu said this, he heard a strange sound.

"Whoo, Whoo," the sound was loud and frightening.

Monu turned around and saw that it was the golden candle broken into two pieces.

"Monu," said the golden candle, in a funny voice, "you were playing with me, you were throwing me all over the place, then I broke. Don't lie Monu, tell your father the truth!"

Poor Monu was now very scared.

He told his father the truth.

His father smiled and said, "Well Monu I hope the magic candle will teach you to tell the truth.

It's a magic candle and it can do many things."

After that day Monu told the truth, he never ever lied!

